

www.rightresult.net

The Right Result website was launched in August 2006 with a view to creating an alternative Premier League table based upon how things would look if the referees got all the key decisions correct.

These decisions relate to penalties that aren't given when they should be, and those that are awarded dubiously, whether a ball did or didn't cross the line, goals disallowed for questionable offside and so on. Decisions are made virtually every week that not only can affect the scoreline of a game, but actually alter the outcome.

Each week the Right Result panel selects the key controversies that have happened during the course of the week's matches, applies the strict rules of the game to them and passes judgement on whether or not those decisions should stand. If not then the match results are adjusted accordingly (for rules see www.rightresult.net/rulebook).

The panel is a neutral and independent body comprised of members from the Association of Football Statisticians (www.11v11.com).

Please find for your information this end of season synopsis including the final Right Result League table accompanied by statistical information and analysis as supplied by the Association of Football Statisticians.

91 wrong decisions have affected the scoreline of games this season.

In the Right Result league table overall there would be 20 additional home goals scored and 37 extra away goals.

Being at home clearly makes a difference to scorelines.

This data supports the contention that better refereeing will lead to more goals, especially for away teams.
